Tawai is a term used by the nomadic hunter-gatherers of Borneo to describe their deep connection to the forest. In this documentary, Bruce Parry embarks on a journey across the Amazon, Borneo, the River Ganges and the Isle of Skye to explore diverse human relationships with nature and how these shape our societies. Tawai is a quest for reconnection, offering a powerful perspective on humanity's bond with the natural world and the insights it holds.

After or before the screening the director will give a pre-recorded keynote.
