The Salt of the Earth, directed by Juliano Ribeiro Salgado and Wim Wenders, is a documentary on photographer Sebastião Salgado. Over forty years, he captured marginalized communities, highlighting humanity's resilience and the planet's fragility. The film follows his journey from photojournalism to founding Instituto Terra, a non-profit for ecosystem restoration in Brazil. With striking black-and-white imagery, it reveals Salgado's commitment to the connection between humanity and nature.

Juliano Ribeiro Salgado, director of the film and president of Instituto Terra, will be in attendance to deliver a keynote speech before the screening, followed by a Q&A session.
